Art in Schools Month

IS A GOOD PLACE TO START!

If we had our way at the Arts Commission, every space, inside and out, would be beautiful. From the designs of the buildings we live and work in to little corners of our world, each inch should be a feast for the eyes and the brain. Many millions of dollars are dedicated to creating spaces which house businesses in our towns. Productivity is enhanced and improved by stimulating environments.

We want our citizens to reach their full potential in whatever field they choose. It makes sense then to start at the very beginning. Children should have the same opportunity to work in spaces which pay attention to all their educational needs, and that includes art.

Our community is fortunate that educational leadership across the board recognizes the “super value” that the arts bring to all our children. The Boyle County Schools have just dedicated a beautiful arts center available to enhance programming for the district. The Danville Independent Schools declared Art in Schools Month with a comprehensive collaborative approach throughout the system.

Recent renovations and new construction in school buildings across the county and city districts took into consideration the importance of a creative environment for children to “work” in every day.

Taking art to new levels is a community effort. The school systems will be joining forces to present two weeks of summer arts camps. One week, held at Danville High School's Gravelly Hall Performing Arts Center, will focus on grades 1 – 6. The second week, at Boyle Performing Arts Center, will serve 7th– 12th grade students.

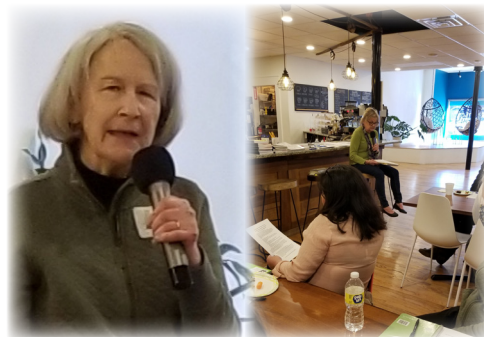

On May 10th, Danville Sings' Resonance Men's Choir and Sound-ing Joy Women's Choir under the direction of Barbara Hall, will present its first spring concert in nearly three years. The concert will be held at the Boyle County Performing Arts Center and will feature the Danville High School Choir directed by Scott Walker. In this photo, the choirs participated in the Great American Brass Band Parade in 2021.

Follow the chain, arts connect us all! And, the only score is the one driving the music!

SUCH A LOVELY EVENING, Women Writers 2022

Thanks to the Kentucky Federation of Business and Professional Women's Foundation, the Arts Commission presented the third in our Covid interrupted writing series on March 28th at Dry Stack. In the photo on the left, Patsi Trollinger holds the audience's attention with her tales of her professional writing career including the pleasure of being published and the disappointment of rejected manuscripts. She shared how she learned to accept the bad news, while still believing in the concept of her story.

In the photo on the right, Kathy Miles presents the positive and rewarding aspects of writing to reflect on life's issues, passages, and how we can use personal writing to build awareness and coping techniques. Chris Claunch, shown listening to Kathy in the lower left of the photo, shared poems she wrote to cope with personal loss and grief.

April brings Farmer's Market and NEW art opportunities

Right outside our front door is a wonderful open space just waiting for artists! This summer, the Arts Commission is working with Farmer's Market to enhance artists' involvement in the Market with additional spaces available through Arts Commission membership as well as regular Farmer's Market membership. Artists who wish to exhibit at the Market can contact the Arts Commission at arts@historicdanvilleky.com. The Market opens April 23rd at 9:00 am.

In addition, hooray!, the Arts Commission, Farmer's Market and the Chamber of Commerce are partnering to rejuvenate the Constitution Square Festival on Sept. 17th. Artists wishing to participate in this Festival may download the printable Festival application from www.danvillearts.org beginning on April 1st. The application includes information on the registration process. For additional information, please email the Arts Commission at the same address.

NEWS & NOTES

- Danville High School student work will be on exhibit in the Schoolhouse at Constitution Square from April 22nd – May 2nd. An Open House will be held on April 23rd from 9:00 – noon. The public is welcome to visit. The students received a grant for the project through the Louise Wilkinson program at the Arts Commission.
- Michael Hughes will be at the Schoolhouse on May 7th from 9:00 – noon to talk about his exhibit “Side by Side.”
- Our long-time partner, the Great American Brass Band Festival, is saying goodbye to director Missy Angolia after this year's Festival. We will miss her! If you know someone who is interested in this opportunity contact info@gabbbf.org.
