Steve Hoffman – 2023 Arts Citizen of the Year

The Arts Citizen of the Year award was initiated in 2004 by the Arts Commission to recognize an individual or individuals who have, throughout their careers, exhibited a commitment to the arts which has enriched us all.

2023 marks the 20th Arts

Citizen of the Year award.

The Arts Commission Board is pleased to recognize Steve Hoffman for his many contributions to Danville and Boyle county not only in his role as Executive Director of the Norton Center at Centre College, but his engagement in the community. Steve's career prior to coming to Danville included work in museums and cultural centers in California and South Dakota. These experiences made him a perfect fit for the Norton Center and Centre College. His natural inclination is to view performances and the arts as tools to enrich and enhance life in the broader community.

The annual season at the Norton Center includes internationally recognized performers, new and innovative performance artists, a wide variety of multi-disciplinary arts programs and multiple opportunities for young students to experience live theater.

Beyond his work at the Norton Center, Steve has served on several local boards including the Gladys Project and the Art Center of the Bluegrass. He has served as Co-chair of the Chamber of Commerce Leadership Boyle Arts and Culture Day.

Steve is not only as arts administrator, he is an artist. His photographs have been selected twice for the Governor's Derby Art Exhibit at the Capitol. In addition to recognizing the Arts Citizen of the Year, the Arts Commission is also recognizing the Norton Center for 50 years of bringing world-class entertainment and diverse arts experiences to the local community. The impact of the Norton Center in the cultural life of our immediate area can be felt beyond the stage. Collaborative programming, student access and national recognition have benefitted many beyond the Centre

College campus. The awards presentations will be made at the Danville City Commission meeting at City Hall on January 8th at 5:30. The public is welcome to attend. A short reception will follow the presentations at City Hall. In honor of Steve Hoffman, the Arts Commission has made a contribution to the Norton Center's Arts for the Classroom Ticket Subsidy program.
